knowledge of soil and plant processes important to the management of fertilizers and lime. It places these processes in the context of 4R Nutrient Stewardship, showing their relevance to choices for the right source of nutrient application at the right rate, at the right time, and in the right place. It shows how these 4Rs contribute strongly to economic, environmental and social outcomes. This manual is useful as a guide for self-study. It also provides the basis for short courses or soil fertility workshops. It supplements university textbooks and serves as an excellent resource for those preparing for nutrient management and soil and water management components of the International Certified Crop Adviser (CCA) exams"--Provided by publisher.
